Finding Aid for the
Illustrations & Papers of Kreigh T. Collins
Collection # 056

March 2009 version

Abstract

The Illustrations and Papers of Kreigh T. Collins collection contains the bulk of the known archival papers and illustrations compiled from the Estate of the Grand Rapids artist Kreigh T. Collins (1908-1974). Included are some of his childhood sketches; his early & occasional advertising art; book illustrations; illustrations for several church publications, including those of the Methodist Church Bureau, or youth related publications; and panels from his three better known comic strips "Mitzi McCoy," "Kevin the Bold" and "Up Anchor." Also included are reference materials, personal and professional correspondence, scrapbooks, sketchbooks, scripts, clippings, and other writings. Some 63 portraits, landscapes, drawings, and other work were transferred from this collection to the Public Museum of Grand Rapids. Other examples of Collins work may be found in private hands or at the Grand Rapids Art Museum. Additional processing continues to be done to improve the documentation and housing of this collection. An oral history in from Teresa Collins (Mrs. Kreigh Collins) was recorded in the Winter of 2003/2004, and is attached to this collection.

Collection #: 056

Accession #: 00.000[1980?]; 2000.113 ; 2001.088 ; 2004.094 ; 2007.068

Donor: Kreigh Collins Estate, 1973 ; Jack Bromiley additions

Span dates: 1914-1973

Processor: Original rough organization by William C. Black, January, 1988; finding aid edited and reformatted by Richard H. Harms, December 1996. Inventory Dec. 1999, Betty Gibout. Box Summary, Marcella Beck, August 31,2000

During 2000 through 2002, this collection received additional processing, including the foldering of most items, which had previously be loose in the boxes. Reboxing was done, to lighten the weight the boxes, and to put materials in the correct box sizes. Fuller descriptions were added to the finding aid, including arrangement or annotation by numbers (perhaps from Collins) found written on most items. Primarily archivist Rebecca Mayne, with the assistance of AARP employee Dee Henry did this work during 2001. Additionally, the Collins biography was revised and corrected, with new articles about Collins added to the biographical materials.

Teresa Collins Oral History addition. 2000.

Processing Notes

This collection contains original art work which were never fully processed, and were originally housed without benefit of folders or adequate inventory. Several oversized items were previously housed in very large locally constructions 1.5 inch print boxes which were heavy and awkward to handle. There was no opportunity to improve this situation before the first move, and the movers were instructed to use special handling to compensate for the weight and size of the problem boxes. However, there were still problems moving this material.

After the first move, additional processing was started on the collection to specifically rehouse the very large oversized material, and additionally to provide better housing and documentation for some of the other original art work, publication art in the collection, and information about the art & artist in the clippings. In some cases, items were moved out of boxes into flatfiles for better housing. During this time particular attention was given to placing items in the best sized box for the size of the item, as it best practice, and to using the original identifications provided by the creator to more correctly arrange the materials.

Unfortunately, the twenty hour person working on this collection left before the project was complete, and there has not been sufficient resources to continue the work to date as planned. Thus, there are many containers labeled as being in transition from the old container to the number, lack of full new inventory information recorded, and other data only partially plugged in to the new finding aid version. At this point in 2007, items should be presumed to be correctly housed in the container they currently occupy, although additional intellectual examination of the items in the future may cause them to more correctly be housed elsewhere in the collection.

The new processing made significant improvements in the protection of the items, and also in the item level documentation of some of the materials. Old item counts in old versions of the finding aid often did not match actual holdings found during the later processing, which could mean incorrect original counts, but often means shifting of materials from one location to another during patron use. The new processing which has been completed should provide better documentation to allow correct return of material to the container to which it is officially assigned. No inventory was done upon original receipt of the collection and documentation of items by the creators number was rarely done until the post 2000 era processing. It is possible & likely that many items were never received (by the numbers). There is still no full item inventory in all cases.

The most immediate processing priority is to confirm the new box numbering and the existing contents of those boxes. Subsequent processing may further improve on this work. The information given in some of the series notes needs to be adjusted to reflect the changes, as time is available.

Biography (in revision & inaccurate still in parts)

Kreigh T. (Taylor) Collins was born in Davenport, Iowa, January 1, 1908, to Stephen W. and Nora C. Collins. He attended high school at Cincinnati (Ohio) High, where he majored in art, but dropped out at 16 to pursue art in earnest. He studied art in Cleveland (1924-1925), and in 1925 opened his own studio. It was during this period that he met Theresa VanderLaan, whom he married in 1929 after a year spent studying in Paris (with visits to North Africa). She became the model for many of his characters, especially in "Up Anchor" and "Kevin the Bold," as well as model for many of his sketches, paintings, and studies. They moved to Chicago in 1929, where he worked for an advertising agency. Collins disliked advertising illustration. In the fall of 1930 the Collins family moved to Grand Rapids, Michigan, where he again took up advertising illustration. Then, in 1931, he and Theresa, returned to Paris, where he worked and studied, and first began to concentrate on his landscapes.

Upon their return to the states, the Depression was severe, but Collins did well, and in 1935 painted and sold many landscapes in the small village of Leland, Michigan. Then, in 1935-1936, he contracted with a newspaper syndicate to illustrate the "Do You Know" series by Willis Atwell for the Michigan Centennial. During the next two years, he painted portraits in Ohio, eight 20' X 40' or larger murals in Dallas, and landscapes in Taos, New Mexico. All the work caught up with him, and in late 1937 he could no longer use his right arm to paint. He discovered, however, that he could make line drawings by resting his elbow on the arm rest of a chair and his forearm on the drawing board. The Methodist Publishing House, which had until then bought only a few of his travel sketches, started sending him large quantities of work. He also illustrated the Informative Classroom "Teaching Pictures." In 1941 he found he could do a small amount of painting again without pain, and among other projects painted an official portrait of Supreme Court Justice McDonald.

In 1948 Collins signed an agreement with NEA to syndicate a comic strip to be titled "Mitzi McCoy." The strip was a great success, and in 1950 "Kevin The Bold" was launched. "Kevin" was equally successful, and had a long run. Then in 1968 Collins started a new type of comic strip "Up Anchor" which was a departure from either the adventure or the slapstick form, the prevalent types then in vogue. The new strip followed the daily lives of a family on a sailboat. This strip also proved to be a success, and continued until Collins' retirement in 1973 due to ill health.

Collins died on January 8, 1974. Theresa Collins died January 9, 2008, with the obituary and photo published in the Grand Rapids Press on Jan. 16, 2008. They had four sons, Eric, David, Glen, and Kevin.

Scope and Content

Spanning the years ca. 1914-73, the collections of many of the works of Collins from the various stages of his career, and portray the styles and techniques he developed in his illustrations and paintings. The papers give an insight not only into the man, but also of the place of the artist in the Depression, and (through his patriotic illustrations) World War II, two of the major events of his lifetime. The collections are valuable both to the art historian and the historical researcher. The collection consists of: Correspondence, Scripts, Sketchbooks, Scrapbooks, Sketches, Paintings, Comic Strips, Historical Illustrations, Illustrations, Publications, Photographs, Overlays, Miscellaneous, Clippings.

Series Descriptions

Series I. CORRESPONDENCE, 1914-1973.

Arranged chronologically by subject.

Consists of correspondence with publishers, arranged by cartoon strip or by story line, but also includes personal letters, letters to his parents, sailing, and miscellaneous.

Series II. SCRIPTS

No arrangement.

Consists of various scripts for articles, including "How To" articles Collins wrote and illustrated. Includes many rough drafts, final drafts and copies of the published articles and illustrations.

Series III. SKETCHBOOKS

No arrangement.

The series consists of five sketchbooks, primarily pencil, with some pen and ink sketches. Volumes V-VIII also contain notes and story lines by Collins. A watercolor is included in Volume V. The sketchbooks date from c1930-1940.

Series IV. SCRAPBOOKS

No arrangement.

Consists primarily of clippings of "A Town Like Yours" series, travel memorabilia, and theater programs.

Series V. Sketches

The series consists of the sketches of Collins. Included are pencil, pen & ink, pastels, and charcoals, all on paper or board, varying from the Paris sketches (1931) to sketches of Collins' wife (1926-1960s) to landscapes and boats. Many studies are incorporated into the sketches, with many of the pen & ink and pencil sketches using both sides of the paper and/or board.

Previously there was no arrangement, but some attempt to document items using the creators numbering is bring some order to the materials, though not yet complete.

Series VI. PAINTINGS

Arranged by format.

Consists of four watercolors, folders 10-13, and six oils. Included in the works are a signed self-portrait and two, an oil and a watercolor of his wife.

Series VII. COMIC STRIPS

Arranged chronologically by work.

Consists of original layouts for "Mitzi McCoy" 1949-1950, "Kevin the Bold" 1950-1953, and "Up Anchor" 1968-1971. Also includes public relations material and prospectuses for the three comic strips.

Series VIII. HISTORICAL ILLUSTRATIONS

"Do You Know"

Arranged chronologically by publication date.

The series of historical illustrations, titled "Do You Know," produced by Collins to accompany Willis Atwell's historical facts, were used in a publication to celebrate the State of Michigan's centennial (1935-1937). Collins illustrations contain the publication month & day, and an illustration number. The published book form, called "Do You Know", contains the same date & illustration number, and can be used as an index to the original illustrations. In addition to the book form, the "Do You Know" series was syndicated, by Booth newspapers and originally published in the 8 different Michigan newspapers.

(Unconfirmed) The series contains both copies for the different panels in the scrapbook the printed column, often from different newspapers.

Series IX. ILLUSTRATIONS

Arranged in boxes first by like size.

Arranged numerically within the box, with Boxes 23 & 24 the same size & main sequence. The number used is in lower left-hand corner, if given. Some numbers are duplicated, others are absent. The source of the number is unknown.

These illustrations are believed to have been done by Collins for various books, magazines and serials. Included are many of the works done for the Methodist Publishing Bureau. It is hoped they these will eventually be matched to the publication where used, and the citation to the publication given.

This section, has been rearranged. Boxes 20 & 21 are no longer available.

Series X. PUBLICATIONS

Arranged by journal. No arrangement for books.

The series consists primarily of the many journals containing Collins illustrations or illustrated articles. Several illustrations were advertisements, especially for the Wiedman Brewing Co. Books containing Collins illustrations are also included here.

Series XI. PHOTOGRAPHS

Arranged by subject.

Consists of 129 photos, some of Collins and his wife c1930, of his boats, trips, and miscellaneous photos used for illustrations. Includes photos of several of his murals, and of the White family, used for illustrations.

Series XII. OVERLAYS

No arrangement.

Consists of overlays used to form comic strip scenes, etc. Contains miscellaneous characters and scenes, plus some overlays used in general illustrations.

Series XIII. CLIPPINGS

No Arrangement.

Consists of clippings of Collins works from various newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, and especially trade journals. Also includes clippings that pertain to Collins activities as an artist as seen within the community of his peers.

Series XIV. CHILDHOOD WORKS

Arranged by format.

Consists of watercolors, pencil sketches and crayon drawings of Collins from 1914-18. Includes pencil comics drawn at age 9 and 10. The series reveals the early development of Collins as an artist, especially as to subjects and their treatment, mediums chosen, etc.

Series XV. MISCELLANEOUS

No arrangement.

Contains primarily sketches of dogs by Collins, and photos and prints of dogs used by Collins in his works. Also contains miscellaneous items given to Collins by other illustrators, childhood report cards, etc.

Also added here is Theresa VanderLaan Collins oral history of herself, her family and her husband, Kreigh Collins, taken in Dec. 11, 2003, Feb. 21, 2004, and Mar. 7, 2004 by Barbara Robinson. 2004.094, and added to the collection 1/20/2005

Note: The Public Museum of Grand Rapids also hold 63 works by Collins, including: portraits, landscapes, drawings, and miscellaneous works in various mediums.

Notebook Sketches.

These items have hole punches on the left side, and a second number on the back. There are perhaps originally part of a notebook of study sketches. A17 is dated in the European manner, “20/1/23”, suggesting that they are student work, when Collins was in his teens. Ink on paper.
