Biography

Godfrey J. Anderson was born in Sparta, Michigan on November 14, 1895 to Swedish-born parents. An only child, Anderson spent the first ten years in Sparta and then lived for a brief time in Tennessee. The family moved back to Grand Rapids, living with an uncle on Bridge Street, until they bought a farm in Ottawa County, one mile west of the Kent-Ottawa County line. Anderson attended Berlin High School in what is now known as Marne.

After completing high school, Anderson worked with his father on the farm, until being drafted in the spring of 1918. His war service included membership in the Polar Bears, a unit primarily composed of men from a single Michigan regiment. The Polar Bears were sent to Archangel, Russia, upon the fall of the czarist government to the Bolsheviks, who immediately signed a peace treaty with Germany. Because the Allies still had supplies in Russia at that time, the Allied troops were sent there, to guard those supplies and to care for the casualties of the resulting Bolshevik offensive.

With the end of the war and discharge Anderson returned to the farm and shortly thereafter began work at Berkey & Gay Furniture Co., No. 1. A year later he took a job with Johnson Furniture, continuing there until his retirement in 1963.

Upon retirement, Anderson was free to devote his time to documenting the world around him. Interested in history and photography from an early age, Anderson turned to photographing a changing Grand Rapids and Kent County, while also copying photographs of historic importance. He also documented the Grand River as its bridges changed from iron truss to concrete spans, and its dams and mills fell into disuse. Anderson died on April 23, 1981, before completing a history of turn-of-the-century Sparta, on which he had been working.

Scope and Content

The collection documents Sparta and Grand Rapids from the 1850s to the 1970s. Structures and street scenes are the primary vehicles used by Anderson to exhibit change. Especially important is the capture of the urban renewal of the late 1960s. In the Grand River series, Anderson has captured many of the iron truss bridges that gave way in the late 1960s and early 1970s, to concrete spans of greater physical strength, but less personality. As well, dams, mills and canals are featured, and Anderson took many views both in spring and fall. The series is a look at the Grand River as it was. The same may be said of the Sparta series, a methodical photographic view of Sparta, 1960-1972. The manuscript series constitutes an attempt to write a history of Sparta as experienced and viewed by Anderson as a young boy growing up in turn of the century Sparta. See also the separate Coll. 023, Godfrey J. Anderson Manuscript Collection.

Series Descriptions

Series I. Manuscript Drafts and Notes

Consists of notes, sketches and rough drafts of a history of Sparta Anderson intended to write. Includes brief biographies of Sparta citizens, vignettes of early Sparta life, including the authors, and descriptions of streets as centers of local life.

Series II. Polar Bear Expedition

Contains seventy (70) photographs of the Polar Bear Expedition in Russia during 1918-1919, especially of the 310th Engineers. Also includes one program of the 1936 ninth reunion of the 310th Engineers Association. Photographs depict the geographical, climatic and the strategic conditions of the expedition. Photos consists primarily of copies of other photos, illustrations and maps, with some original Anderson photographs.

Series III. Grand River Bridges

Contains 1,542 photos of the bridges, dams, sluices and power stations on the Grand River as well as views up stream and down from the various subjects. Photos by Anderson, 1950s and 1960s, with some historical photos copied by Anderson of Grand Rapids bridges over the Grand. Sectional maps are included in each volume for the photo subjects covered.

Series IV. Historic Grand Rapids

Contains 606 photographs, primarily copied from the original photographs of Fitch, Hooper, Johnston and other early Grand Rapids photographers. Covering the history of Grand Rapids from the 1850s to the 1920s, the emphasis is upon the physical structure of a changing Grand Rapids.

Series V. Grand Rapids, 1950s & 1960s

Contains four hundred and eleven (411) black & white photographs of Grand Rapids taken by Anderson during the fifties and sixties. Areas of special interest to Anderson were those slated for destruction, either through Freeway construction or urban renewal. Box 14 consists of 111 8" X 10"s. Box 15 contains 300 4" X 5"s.

Series VI. Sparta

Consists of seven hundred and fourteen (714) photos of Sparta. With the exception of the "historical Sparta" folder, all are original photos taken by Anderson. Folders 62 through 85 contain house by house photos taken by Anderson during the late 1960s and early 1970s.
