Abstract:	The James B. Winslow collection contains items in numerous formats, representing the eclectic historical and collecting interests of the donor. Winslow's special interest and expertise has been in the history of Michigan and national railroads and railroading, only a portion of which are included here. The railroad materials in this collection focus on Grand Rapids area rail lines, such as the Grand Trunk Railway System. Also in the collection are items from many Grand Rapids businesses, clubs and organizations. The material includes correspondence, photographs, architectural drawings and ephemera.

Biographical / Historical

Born September 7, 1939 in Grand Rapids and raised there, with a long family history in the area, James B. Winslow has had a life-long interest in West Michigan and Grand Rapids history. In an interview in August 2001, Winslow stated that he began collecting historical items in the 1970s and has become increasingly focused on Michigan railways, having a personal collection of 22,000 to 28,000 items. He continues to donate items of Grand Rapids interest to the GRPL Local History Archives, where he also did volunteer work in 1997, processing the various railroads collections and giving some attention to the Reeds Lake/ Vaudeville area holdings.

Winslow attended Ottawa Hills High School, Junior College in Grand Rapids and graduated in 1968 from Michigan State University. He has four children and eight grandchildren. Jim worked for GM for 31 years, retiring in 1996. He is past president and a current member of the Grand Rapids Historical Society. He is past director of the National Pennsylvania Railway Society and he serves presently as Historian of the Western Michigan Railroad Historical Society and President of the Grand Trunk Western Historical Society. In addition to an article in Keystone magazine, included in this collection, Winslow has published a number of other articles for railway publications and one for Smithsonian magazine.

In 2003, Jim Winslow married for the second time, and his life took another direction. He no longer has the large collections that he once has on railroading, but continues to maintain some historical interests and activities.

Scope and Contents

Winslow's collection represents broad collecting in many aspects of Grand Rapids history. The railroading documents included here represent only a small portion of the large materials now collected by Mr. Winslow. Most items he acquired individually or as small sets, such as the glass lantern slides, which are primarily advertising, or the set of images on the block fire.

Fuller description has been given to individual items than in most GRPL collections, to reflect the collecting strategy of the donor and to provide better access to the materials.
