Biographical / Historical

Since the early 1900s, neighbors in Grand Rapids have been forming associations and alliances in order to encourage unity and preserve unique cultures and traditions. Some of these associations have created traditions such as street fairs and neighborhood watches in order to create pride and pool resources. As is common among cities, many neighborhoods in Grand Rapids began as ethnic communities. Polish and German immigrants settled on the West Side and the Dutch on the East Side.

The Creston neighborhood was one of Grand Rapids' first neighborhoods to create an organization. The Creston Citizen's Association was formed in 1906 for neighbors and businesspeople in the area. Little is known about associations that existed between the time of

The Creston Citizen's Association and the emergence of many neighborhood associations in the 1970s.

During the 1970s neighborhood associations flourished. President Nixon worked to build a stronger relationship between neighborhoods and the federal government. In Grand Rapids, neighborhood associations such as Eastown Community Association and Garfield Park Neighborhood Association were formed by neighbors concerned about the declining appearance and increasing crime in their neighborhoods. Heritage Hill Neighborhood Association also formed during this time to advocate for the preservation of historic structures threatened by urban renewal. The Madison Neighborhood Association and Belknap-Lookout Neighborhood Association were formed by ACORN, a national organization. These neighborhood groups formed by ACORN eventually broke away from ACORN to form their own neighborhood associations.

Since the 1970s many more neighborhood associations have formed in Grand Rapids. Some of these associations such as the Madison Area Neighborhood Association and the South East End Neighbors have gone through rough times. Many organizations have broken up and reformed as boundaries and causes shifted. Creston Neighborhood Association is an example of this as they absorbed the North End Neighborhood Association.

In 1967, President Lyndon B. Johnson initiated a Model Cities Program, which was intended to bring a working relationship between the federal government and neighborhoods. The program struggled to keep up with the relationship, which frustrated neighbors all across America. President Richard Nixon became aware of this frustration and signed the Community Development Act of 1974. The legislation came into place under President Gerald R. Ford. This legislation was intended to revive the idea of Model Cities in America. President Ford consolidated the funding from numerous neighborhood projects to create CDBG (Community Development Block Grants).

Grand Rapids involved its citizens in the legislation and received numerous CDBG grants. Stocking, Belknap, Baxter, Madison, Roosevelt Park, John Ball Park, Eastown and Heritage Hill were among the many neighborhoods who received these grants. These neighborhoods each formed a Target Area Council to oversee the grant money in the neighborhood.

Common projects for the Target Area Councils in Grand Rapids included home repair, alley paving and lighting, tree planting, park beautification and crime prevention. Many of these Target Area Councils helped to gain interest in neighborhood organizations and were either absorbed into or helped to create neighborhood associations once the projects were completed.

Scope and Contents

Previously Coll. 252 was called the Ottawa Hills Neighborhood Association Records. In the Spring of 2006 it was decided to broaden the scope of Coll. 252, to create a home for materials received in the department from the various neighborhood associations. At the same time, staff were aware that informative materials on the neighborhoods were not being received in the department, and should be sought from the various area organizations. Calvin College student intern Emily Hamstra took on the challenge to obtain new materials from the associations, and to assist in the organization of new and existing materials to create Coll. 252.

Note: East Grand Rapids may feel like a neighborhood to those living in the Grand Rapids community. But, in fact, it is a separate incorporation, and not an official neighborhood of Grand Rapids proper. Perhaps the most comprehensive access to information about East Grand Rapids may be available in the History Room, at the East Grand Rapids Library. Ask Grand Rapids Public Library staff for assistance in finding information on East Grand Rapids in the various collections of the GRPL Archives.

Neighbors of Belknap Lookout (00.[5018])

Scope and Contents

The Belknap neighborhood formed the Hill District Improvement Association in 1962. The Hill District Improvement Association was one of the first active neighborhood associations in Grand Rapids in the post-WWII era. This organization fizzled out as the neighborhood became a popular neighborhood for renters and college students.

Noticing the need for a neighborhood association in the Belknap Lookout neighborhood, ACORN, a national organization, sought to revive the association. But, the neighbors found ACORN to be too controlling, and formed Neighbors of Belknap Lookout on their own in 1978.

The neighborhood association began a relationship with the hospitals that began to develop in the area. Tensions between the two groups began to ease in the 1990's when the hospitals built Belknap Commons. Belknap Commons became a community and health care center for the people of the neighborhood.

The material for this collection came from the "Neighbors of Belknap Lookout" vertical file.

Creston Neighborhood Association

Scope and Contents

The Creston neighborhood was the first neighborhood to organize its own associations. The Creston Citizens Association formed in 1906. Though this group helped to establish the Creston neighborhood, they are not related to the Creston Neighborhood Association of the present.

The Creston Neighborhood Association was formed in 1970. On October 28, 2003, by unanimous vote, the North End Neighborhood Association was absorbed into the Creston Neighborhood Association.

Most of the documents from this collection come mainly from the "Creston Neighborhood Association" vertical file. Copies of "The C.N.A. News" were printed from the association's website.

East Hills Council of Neighbors

Scope and Contents

The East Hills Council of Neighbors was formed in 1978. Neighbors met initially to discuss the crime related to the bars in their neighborhood. In 1986 the East Hills Council of Neighbors helped to close the White Rabbit Bar, which decreased neighborhood crime. The Council has been working to utilize the large population of artists in the neighborhood to enhance the neighborhood aesthetically.

The East Hills Council of Neighbors is a conglomeration of six smaller neighborhoods- Cherry Hills, Fairmount Square, Fitch Corners, Congress Park, Diamond Gate, and Orchard Hill.

In 1989 Cherry Hill formed its own association to confront problems of absentee landlords and drug crime. The Cherry Hill Association also worked on the historical preservation of homes in the area. The Cherry Hill Association has since fizzled out, and was included in the East Hills Council of Neighbors again.

Easttown Community Association

Scope and Contents

In 1970 the WEFF (Wealthy, Ethel, Fulton, and Fuller) Association formed within those street boundaries to address issues of crime and absentee landlords.

In 1973 Dr. Norbert Hruby, President of Aquinas College, began to worry about the decline of the neighborhood and the subsequent effect on Aquinas College. Hruby formed the Easttown Community Association, which replaced WEFF as a more active association.

Twenty-one neighborhood residents, who are elected annually, now govern the Easttown Community Association. The association oversees the annual Easttown Street Fair, as well as many other programs of both neighborhood and citywide importance. The association has taken an active role in crime prevention.

Most of the documents in this collection were taken from the "Easttown Community Association" vertical file. Copies of the "Easttown Access" newsletter were taken from Collection 285, Michigan and Grand Rapids Serials Collection.

Scope and Contents

In 1973 Garfield Park residents Don Janderonoa and Katie Cuncannan joined together members of the Burton Heights Ministerial Alliance, area business leaders, and concerned neighbors to form the Garfield Park Neighborhood Association.

This association helped to unite the neighborhood after the race riots of 1967. Neighbors joined together to revive Garfield Park to patch the scars of the riots on the park.

The documents in this collection were found in the "Garfield Park Neighborhood Association" vertical file and on the association website.

Heritage Hill Association

Scope and Contents

The Heritage Hill Neighborhood Association first formed in 1968 as a response to new developments that would destroy the historic homes in the neighborhood. By lobbying to make Heritage Hill a historic district, the association helped to save the neighborhood from an urban renewal project that would have leveled most of the neighborhood. Today, Heritage Hill is one of the largest historic districts in the United States.

The association began with historical interests, but then grew to include community issues such as crime and education.

The documents from this collection come primarily from the "Heritage Hill Association" vertical file and the association website.

Heritage Hill Target Area Council 00.[3058].1

Scope and Contents

The Heritage Hill Target Area was one of the neighborhoods that received CDBG (Community Development Block Grants) in the mid to late 1970's. The Heritage Hill neighborhood formed a Target Area Council to oversee the grant. The grant helped to assist homeowners with much needed home repairs. This program helped to improve the conditions of some of the historic houses of Heritage Hill, as well as improve the parks, streets, and alleys. The program sought to create more parks in the neighborhood, and to expand the amount of historical markers throughout the neighborhood.

The Heritage Hill Target Area Council records were formerly housed in Collection 254. These items were evidently sent from Abe Drasin, and appear to have passed by the desk of City Commissioner William Johnson. This collection includes meeting minutes as well as some correspondence.

Madison Area Neighborhood Association

Scope and Contents

The Madison Area Neighborhood Association, like Neighbors of Belknap Lookout, was formed by the national organization ACORN. The Madison Neighborhood broke free from the ACORN organization so that the association would be under the control of people of the Madison area.

In 1979, free from the ACORN organization, the Madison area neighbors formed their independent neighborhood association named in honor of the father of Civil Rights in Grand Rapids, Paul I. Phillips.

The Paul I. Phillips Association experienced financial trouble over the years and slowly became less active as a community organization.

In the 1980's The United Methodist Church Community House became worried about the lacking Paul I. Phillips Association and formed the South End Community Association.

In 1987, South End Community Association and neighbors in the Madison area again became one united association.

SECA continued to grow, and in 1996, Madison neighbors decided again to separate the associations. The Madison Area Neighborhood Association was established as part of the Madison Square Co-Op program that sought to revive the neighborhood.

The Madison Area Neighborhood Association has been independent since 1996.

In May, 1974, individuals outside the South East End, but committed to the neighborhood, formed HEFF (Hall, Eastern, Franklin, Fuller). This organization evolved, and SEENA was formed in 1977.

SEENA targets the housing and drug problems of the neighborhood, and often sponsors parties and parades in King Park.

Much of the material in this collection was found in the South East End Neighborhood Association vertical file.
