Biographical / Historical

The state of Michigan was named after Lake Michigan, which was an adaptation of the Ojibwe term mishigami, meaning "large water." Indeed, Michigan has the longest freshwater shoreline in the USA and consists of two peninsulas connected by the five mile long Mackinac Bridge.

Previous to statehood, what is now Michigan was a part of the larger Michigan Territory, and before that Indiana Territory. Michigan was the 26th state to become a member of the United States of America, in 1837. They entered into the union after a long dispute with Ohio over state boundary lines, a conflict referred to as the Toledo War. Finally, concessions were made and Ohio received the Toledo strip while Michigan was given the upper Peninsula. At first the UP was considered a useless wilderness, however it was soon discovered to be rich in resources. Lumber, iron and copper mining became a prosperous industry.

During the 20th Century, Michigan became the center of the automotive industry. Henry Ford's first automotive plant was located in Detroit.

A couple of titles that may help in researching general Michigan history are:

Historic Michigan : Land of the Great Lakes / George N. Fuller. National Historical Association. Vol. 1-3 found in Box 1.2 of this collection.

A Primer of Michigan History : With a Brief Sketch of the Material Resources of the State / Wm. J. Cox. Lansing, MI : Michigan Education Co., 1924. M977.4 C839p 1915

And in researching Detroit history:

Detroit in It's World Setting : A Three Hundred Year Chronology, 1701 – 2001 / edited by David Lee Poremba.

Detroit : Wayne State university Press, ca. 2001. 977.434 D484

Scope and Contents

The material in this collection is diverse in subject and in form. It includes books, manuscripts, brochures and other promotional material, programs, government documents, proceedings, directories, reports, pages from a newspaper and a clipped piece of letterhead. Subjects range from very general accounts of the history and culture of Michigan to very specific topics such as a beer license law. There is over a hundred and fifty year range in publication dates. The categories were of necessity made very broad.

Because the history of Detroit is so broad, and well represented in other collections across the state, this collection holds relatively few items concerning the history of Detroit.

In preparation for and after the Library's 2000 move to the temporary location at Hall and 131, a considerable amount of shelf reading and book inventory was done. It was decided that especially rare, fragile and/or small books should be pulled from the reading room shelves where they were vulnerable to theft or damage. This collection and one other were formed from these pulled books. A large percentage of the material in this collection was previously cataloged, though some items that were not have been added.

The primary focus of the GRPL Archives is on collecting materials from the Greater Grand Rapids area. It is assumed that the focus on Michigan collecting is done through the institutions of other specific Michigan communities, by the Library of Michigan and the Archives of Michigan, or through archives with a wider collecting mission, such as the Bentley Library at the University of Michigan.

Materials on Michigan are collected, however, for the benefit of GRPL library users, and are primarily housed in the Local History collection within the department. Some archival collections, such as Coll. 281, support the collecting of more fragile or ephemeral materials on Michigan. Michigan related materials can also be found in several other archival collections, either as part of the collecting scope of that particular archival collection, or because of its relationship to the person or organization creating the archival collection where the item is found.

Some collections which do have a Michigan scope, all or in part are: Coll. 177, Michigan Department of Transportation Photos

Coll. 229, Michigan One Room School House Collection.

Coll. 240, Grand Rapids Public Library Map & Atlas Collection. Maps of Michigan are not usually included in Coll. 281, unless they are a graphic poster or included or associated with a publication.

Coll. 280, Grand Rapids Public Library Michigan Travel Literature Collection

See also collections which are primarily about Grand Rapids, but may hold a few items related to Michigan, such as: Coll. 235, Grand Rapids Public Library Michigan & Grand Rapids Music Collection

Biographical / Historical

From the papers of Harold C. Brooks, held by his family. Samuel Worth Hill, 1815-1889, was a surveyor and civil engineer. He worked in the 1835 for the U.S. Topographical Corps of Engineers in the Wisconsin area, including running the boundary line between Wisconsin & Michigan. In the 1840's and 1850's he supported mining operations in the Upper Peninsula. Pg. 29 states that "the mineral region of this State of Michigan was known better by Mr. Hill when living, than all other men combined", and that he was award for his mineral discoveries at the Philadelphia Centennial Exhibitions in 1876.
